The Department of Economic History

Assistant Professor

Salary is competitive with Departments at our peer institutions worldwide and not less than £51,908 pa inclusive

The Department of Economic History is inviting applications for an entry-level career-track Assistant Professorship to further enhance its strengths in research and teaching.

Outstanding junior candidates from all areas of economic history are encouraged to apply. We value diversity of research methodology and invite applications from candidates working on any time period or geographical area and from related disciplines, provided the candidate has an explicitly historical approach.

The successful candidate will be expected to undertake research in economic history and to teach at both undergraduate and graduate levels.

Candidates should have a completed PhD, or be close to obtaining a PhD by September 2016. Candidates near the completion of their PhD must be able to demonstrate potential for internationally leading publications in the field. Early stage post-doctoral researchers must be able to produce evidence of building a track record of internationally leading publications.

The other criteria that will be used when shortlisting for this post can be found on the person specification, which is attached to this vacancy on the LSE's online recruitment system.

In addition to a competitive salary the benefits that come with this job include a defined benefits pension scheme, a research incentive scheme with personal reward options, generous research leave (sabbatical) entitlement, a collegial faculty environment and excellent support, training and development opportunities.

Shortlisted candidates will be invited to give presentations in early December 2015.

To apply for this post, please go to www.lse.ac.uk/Jobs and select "Vacancies". Please ensure that you follow the instructions in the 'How to Apply' letter attached to the post.

The closing date for receipt of applications is 9 November 2015 (23.59 UK time).

We are unable to accept any late applications.
